At the moment Polly Tikkle Productions is producing a short video promo for Polly Higgins' Wish 20 campaign

Last month I completed a 10 minute piece on the Bank Of England's proposed reforms.

Finger Pointing to the Earth feature documentary project has found a new found focus as the role of land ownership and its relationship to wars and ecocide is researched. The trailer has been updated accordingly.

In terms of Occupy, a feature documentary is in the development stage.

As is the case with a lot of my work, I am doing it because I believe such videos may be useful tools for the causes that I believe in whether there are funds to support them or not. Educative messages about systematic change is a staple feature in most of what I produce.

This love for making such videos means that money is an on going issue as I struggle to remain true to my ideals and keep up the craft that I love. I have applied for funding at the Edge Fund and have this funding initiative up for grabs if anyone is interested in furthering its reach.

I am still in London. Today I froze while riding my shared motorcycle through London. My fingers were so cold that I could not ride properly. That is January 2013 for ya' all. Speak to you next month.

January 2013

Warm Regards
